06 St. Germain's Turf & Sims

by Sean Melia

Golf simulators have evolved into multi-purpose “dream rooms” that blend sports, entertainment, and family space, driven by golf’s boom. Brian St. Germain has been at the center of this shift, growing his business from a handful of projects to nearly 50 a year by creating customizable, accessible simulator rooms for homes and communities.

Our Hearts Go Out to Keegan Bradley

When you look at the greatest professional golfers in New England Golf History, the Bradley name is at the top of this list. Pat Bradley captured 31 LPGA Tour Wins including 6 Majors, a LPGA Grand Slam, 3 Solheim Cups and is in the Golf Hall of Fame. Her nephew Keegan Bradley to date has amassed 8 PGA Tour wins, a PGA Championship and played on the 2012 and 2014 Ryder Cup teams and captained the 2025 team. The Bradley family has a total of 39 Tour Victories and 7 Major Championships. Keegan Bradley is the best PGA golfer from New England today, having recently won the Travelers Championship in June 2025. Keegan Finished 2025 in 11th Position in The Ryder Cup Standings, in any other year he would have been a sure pick for the team, but in 2025 he was chosen as Team Captain.

Keegan's choice in picking the 14th, 15th and 16th players in the Ryder Cup standings, Cameron Young, Patrick Cantley and Sam Burns over himself as a potential playing captain, will be the most second-guessed decision in Ryder Cup history. The 15 / 13 Team Europe win at Bethpage in New York will forever be one of Keegan's most difficult memories in his golf career. There is no doubt, if he had played, and the U.S. had won, it would have been one of the most epic Ryder Cups in History.

The Ryder Cup presents a unique challenge for U.S golfers, compared to their European counterparts. European professional golfers have more experience playing match play and team formats (like foursomes and fourball) from a young age compared to their American counterparts, who predominantly focus on individual stroke play. This difference in background means that when Americans transition to the Ryder Cup, the match play format and team dynamic can be less familiar, while for many Europeans, it is a format they have been playing since they were kids. In the first two days of Ryder Cup matches with foursomes play and fourball play this is especially prevalent.

“We will forever celebrate your success and marvel at your achievements. We wish you the best for 2026.”

Keegan Bradley has a complicated love for the Ryder Cup, expressing that the pain of the recent loss at Bethpage Black has been one of the toughest times in his life, yet he still loves the event. This may be true, but the joy Keegan has brought to New England golf fans over the last 15+ years has become part of his legacy as of one of the most passionate athletes in the history of sports in New England.

Brain St. Germain is the simulator sultan in New England. He also has quite the golf game!

BUILDING THE FUTURE OF INDOOR GOLF

The evolution of golf simulators is happening quickly, St. Germain's Turf & Sims is at the cutting edge.

By Sean Melia

For years, people thought of golf simulators as high-tech garages where you hit balls into a screen.

Now, they're a little different.

While visiting one of St. Germain's newest finished projects in New Hampshire. First, music from Teddy Swims filled the room. Then the owner fired up highlights from Super Bowl LI. The famous 28-3 New England Patriots comeback.

This wasn't a living room. It wasn't a theater. It wasn't even a "golf space."

It was all of them.

Over the past five years, golf has become part of the lives of millions of new participants. The record for the number of rounds played is broken every year.

In 2024, 545 million rounds of golf were played in the United States, according to the National Golf Foundation. That broke the 2023 record of 531 million rounds.

In 2023, for the first time in history, more golf balls were hit in "non-traditional" venues like simulators and TopGolf than on green-grass golf courses.

In the Northeast, the season is short, but simulators have become the aloe for those with the itch to play a little golf when the temperatures dip and the snow falls.

For some, that means heading to a nearby simulator.

For others, it means walking down the hallway in their house.

Any way you slice it, Brian St. Germain has the necessary ingredients.

Starting in 2018, St. Germain began shifting his focus from landscaping to indoor golf and simulators. He's been in construction his whole life, and he saw an opportunity to blend work and his passion.

"I'm the worst four handicap you'll ever meet," he said.

The work doesn't feel like work anymore, though.

"It's not a job for me anymore," he said. "It's become a passion."

The Room Everyone Ends Up In

Over the years, St. Germain has seen the golf simulator become the most popular room in the house. It probably explains the explosion of his business, too.

"We probably did three or four simulators in the first year. Now we're doing nearly 50."

The golf boom has helped drive some of that interest. More people have the golf itch and want to scratch it when the ground is covered in snow.

However, St. Germain has seen his clients finding more uses for the rooms he's building for them.

"Eventually, they become multi-dimensional rooms," he said. "You add surround sound and you have an in-home movie theater."

There's even a multi-sport angle. People can purchase a launch monitor that allows them to play soccer, baseball, football, and hockey.

Gaming consoles are also a popular and relatively easy addition to the space.

St. Germain is working with a client who wants to practice his hunting and shooting skills. An additional camera and software, along with a laser affixed to a gun and CO2 cartridges, can turn the room into a “tactical training center.”

The future might entail flight simulators and virtual reality, too.

“So for us, it’s like, how much can you add on to these rooms?”

The sky is the limit for those with a budget that allows.

Jaron Slattery, who just moved into a new home, has found that he’s spending more time than he could have imagined in his new simulator.

“I figured we were probably going to use that space maybe on a Friday night, family movie night, or, you know, a Super Bowl, or masters or something, and then golf,” Slattery said. “But we’re down there nearly every night.

He spoke about his daughter, niece, and nephew watching The Grinch one evening this December. They even kicked the adults out of the room. They wanted the space for themselves.

Slattery found that building the simulator space was one of the easiest parts of building his new home.

“When you go with Brian and his crew, not only are you getting a great group of guys with amazing professionalism, but you are getting someone that is as passionate about your space as you are,” Slattery said.

Over the years, St. Germain has used that passion to master each step of the building process and created a one-stop shop. His company can build out the room, install the technology, and do the finishing work.

For many, the obstacle to building a golf simulator is the process. But St. Germain does it all. Making the experience easy and seamless.

And that matters when there are multiple moving parts, like construction, technology, and soundproofing.

Trackman, the industry leader in golf launch monitors, trusts St. Germain; they’ll even reach out to St. Germain for help installing units in tricky spaces.

“Trackman will call us and say, ‘Hey, I got this guy, and he’s got a room that’s a triangle, that’s got weird ceilings, lights.’”

Trackman will sell the unit to the customer and tell them that St. Germain is the man for the job.

Building a Dream Room

There is a belief that these types of projects are only for the wealthy with expendable income. While that’s part of St. Germain’s clientele, he’s built simulator rooms on a budget and worked with inner-city schools, the Providence YMCA, and Button Hole Golf.

“We’re building these little dream rooms for kids and adults,” St. Germain said. “No matter what, the smile is the same.”

St. Germain is also helping Division 1 programs in the area. The Merrimack College’s student center has two simulators for the team and for general student use. Holy Cross and Providence have also used St. Germain to help them with their practice facilities.

Some people are desperate to have a place to swing a club. Clients have asked St. Germain to build out rooms that aren’t the optimal size, but they insist they’re “short” and can swing with a lower-than-necessary ceiling.

The Dream Room is in the eye of the beholder, and St. Germain wants to help. He understands that some people’s idea of a Dream Room is going to change over time. He aims to be flexible and talk through options.

“You might have a child who is a pretty good golfer,” he said. “You can set up a simple simulator in your garage with a launch monitor, some turf, and a net for a reasonable price. You can add a TV if you want, and you’ve got a pretty good starting point.”

The passion St. Germain exudes for the work isn’t in the new, epic build out, it’s in finding ways to bring golf, and smiles, to everyone.

Gophers: A business venture

St. Germain isn’t just running his simulator business; he also owns Gophers, an indoor golf space in Westford.

Brain St. Germain, www.turfandsims.com

THINGS TO KNOW

SPACE:

- St. Germain said that the room's size stifles most projects. "Some people will say they have a big enough room, and we'll go measure it, and it's just not big enough."
- The ideal room size is 15' wide, 10' tall, and 20' deep. Minimum ceiling: 9.5'
- Why height matters: driver swing plane. Eleven-foot ceilings are fantastic," St. Germain said.

GENERAL TIMELINE:

Most projects take St. Germain's team about 3-4 days to complete once they have access to the space.

BUDGET:

- A bare-bones, entry-level simulator is around $6,500 (e.g., a Garmin R10 + mat + net + TV = $7-8k).
- Trackman, the industry-leading launch monitor, is often the first big upgrade. It costs $24,000.

CONSIDER SOUND:

In St. Germain's estimation, sound and speakers make the room more versatile. It allows for additions like gaming, movies, and streaming services. "I'd save on wall padding and use curtains if it meant I could have a good sound system," St. Germain said.

THREE LEVELS OF HOME SIMULATORS

ENTRY LEVEL ($7-10K):

- Garmin R10
- Mat + net
- Optional TV
- Great for garages + juniors

MID LEVEL ($15-30K):

- ProTee / SkyTrak / Uneekor
- Basic enclosure
- Projector

HIGH END ($50K+):

- TrackMan
- Full room build
- Surround sound, turf, theater-quality setup

THE MOST UNDERRATED UPGRADE: SOUND

- Wall padding ($6k)
- Surround sound ($3-4k)
- Why it matters: turns golf rooms into family rooms

They started with two bays during COVID and then built two more at Mill Works. Over time, he moved all four bays into Mill Works.

It's a way for St. Germain's team to showcase its craftsmanship. Along with Phil Iannazzo, St. Germain's Business Manager, Danny Hickey is the lead fabricator and Brad Walmsley is the licensed builder and lead installer.

The small team works with excellent efficiency.

The work at Gopher's has also highlighted the company's growth and the explosion of indoor golf over the last six years.

Building 50 simulators a year is quite a leap from the three or four he was doing in 2019.

Indoor golf isn't slowing down, and neither is St. Germain. More sports. More access. More possibilities. More smiles.

From tactical training to gaming to full theater integrations, he's already designing the next generation of "sim rooms" — spaces built for families, teams, kids, and anyone chasing a better swing or a better Saturday night.

For St. Germain, the future of indoor golf is simple: If you can dream it, he can build it.

Furnace Brook in Quincy, MA

Beyond the Green Grass: The Rise of Winter Golf Culture in New England

BY SEAN MELIA

THE SEASONAL SWINGS OF GOLF have shifted in the last decade in New England and other cold-weather climates.

In the past, golf bags were tucked away in the corner in November and dusted off when the snow melted. The fortunate golfers planned a trip and escaped to scratch the golf itch in the warm, sunny air down south.

Now, golf is a year-round sport in New England. Simulators have popped up in many towns. Country clubs and public courses have also begun using their facilities to attract golfers in the winter months.

This allows public courses to remain viable in months that were typically quiet or completely closed.

In Quincy, Furnace Brook GC, has renovated its entire clubhouse. The municipal nine-hole course features a brand-new restaurant called The Loft with indoor and outdoor seating. In the basement, they built a simulator room with four bays for lessons, fittings, and recreation.

In addition, they offer full food and beverage service from its restaurant. Quincy residents get a discount on the simulator, too.

Head pro Tom Ellis has already seen some trends as the cold weather has descended on New England.

"A women's group from another club brought in 30 women, rented it out for two hours, then had dinner—and they're doing it multiple times this winter," Ellis said.

Groups are trading in bowling alleys for simulators.

"The Boston police usually go bowling, now they're coming here," he said.

Along with those private events, men's and women's league are filling up, too.

Another positive for clubs like Furnace Brook, is they now have a dedicated space for instruction. Without a range, it's tough to give lessons. Now lessons at Furnace Brook are a year-round opportunity.

The Indoor Boom

According to the National Golf Foundation, off-course golf participation increased by 173% from 2015 to 2024.

In 2015, 7 million people played only off-course golf. In 2024, 19.1 million people played exclusively off-course golf.

The low-key, low-stress atmosphere of indoor golf gives people a gateway into the sport. For some, they just want that experience without having to play on green grass.

However, for others, simulator golf is a great way to learn the game without the pressure of keeping up with the pace of play before transitioning onto a course. If courses like Wachusett and Furnace Brook can attract people to their simulators, they might be more likely to play that course in the summer.

On the private side, clubs can attract new members while current members have another way to build community and spend time at the club in the cold winter months. It adds value to the members and connects the end of one golf season to the beginning of the next.

4 THINGS TO ADD EFFORTLESS

These four fundamentals could be the key to unlocking your longest, most consistent drives yet

Every golfer wants more distance, but not at the expense of their body or consistency. At Tour Physio & Performance, we've found that most players overcomplicate things. If you're serious about hitting it farther with less effort and feeling better doing so, focus on improving these four areas:

1. Flexibility: The Foundation of Rotation

Distance starts with mobility in the hips and upper back. We want golfers rotating their hips at least 30° and their ribcage at least 45°. Better rotation gives your swing a longer arc, more time to build speed, and helps reduce stress on your lower back. Tightness here doesn't just cost distance, it increases injury risk.

2. Strength & Power: Turn Mobility into Speed

Flexibility opens the door, but strength and power help you walk through it. Your legs, core, and upper body must be strong and explosive to transfer force from the ground into the club. Power is about how fast you can create force, not about getting bulky. Developing it helps you generate clubhead speed efficiently and safely.

3. Sequencing & Coordination: Timing Is Everything

Your swing should fire in a specific order: lower body → torso → arms → club. When this sequence breaks down, you lose speed and consistency. Poor coordination is like trying to crack a whip from the wrong end, it just doesn't work. Improving movement quality and timing can unlock speed without changing your technique.

DISTANCE AND PLAY PAIN FREE

4. Strike Location & Ball Flight: Make It Count

Speed means little if you can't find the sweet spot. To maximize distance, you need consistent center-face contact and solid launch conditions. Tour-level benchmarks include:

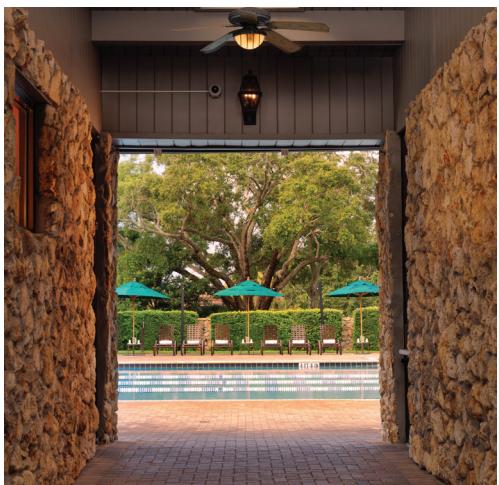

- Smash Factor: 1.48–1.50
- Launch Angle: 14–18°
- Spin Rate: 1,800–2,500 rpm
- Angle of Attack: +2° to +5°

How we help golfers just like you:

At Tour Physio & Performance, we help golfers identify their biggest areas for improvement, so they can focus on the things that actually move the needle. Our Golf Performance Assessment tests all four distance fundamentals and gives you a personalized plan to hit it farther, move better, and feel stronger on and off the course.

Golf Ahoy!

BY DANNY & ALICE SCOTT

European Waterways Canal Cruising

BY DANNY & ALICE SCOTT

YES, CRUISES ARE AGAIN TRENDING,

but how about a luxury Caledonia Canal Cruise, golfing with your favorite foursomes? It's the ultimate vacation with European Waterways. Our classic cruise without golf aboard the Spirit of Scotland in August was one of our most incredible trips. It was a year after a 17-day road trip golfing around Scotland, so we know that Scottish golf added to our barge experience would be icing on an already sweet cake.

Canal Cruising

Canal travel is slow and smooth, the scenery audacious, the service friendly, and the cuisine delectable - at least with our chef, Jim. From the champagne welcome with apps and petit fours to three meals a day and more, Jim surpassed all expectations with his culinary prowess.

Modeled after traditional Scottish steamers, the Spirit of Scotland is a hotel barge designed for an intimate, luxurious experience, welcoming up to 12 guests in six stylish, air-conditioned cabins located below the main deck, each with its own en-suite shower/bathroom and three portholes perfect for watching the scenery drift by at water level.

The captain's bridge sits front and center on the main deck, with open-air walkways wrapping the ship. Plush living and dining spaces unfold, and a heated spa pool on the rear deck is ideal for sunrise soaking with coffee.

A spiral staircase leads to the expansive top deck. Strike the iconic "Titanic" pose at the rail (with a far happier ending) or recline as the Scottish Highlands drift past. Only by sailing through it can one truly grasp the vastness of Loch Ness. The scenery is breathtaking, and the sense of peace beyond compare. European Waterways has perfected the art of luxury barge travel with over 40 years sailing and serving.

Golf Options

Golf Cruises are private whole-barge charters available on numerous European Waterways vessels and include 3-4 tee offs. At least four passengers must be playing golf while non-playing guests are welcome with plenty of alternatives (follow the original Classic Cruise itinerary, explore on foot or by barge bicycle, or pursue other interests discussed at booking).

DESTINATIONS

Golf cruises are available not only in the Scottish Highlands but in France, Italy, the Netherlands, Germany, and Ireland. Golf itineraries are customized depending on course availability and proximity. High on the Scottish list is Cabot Highlands with the renowned Castle Stuart and new Old Petty courses over Moray Firth. Traditional options might include Fortrose and Rosemarkie, Royal Dornoch or beautiful Brora for seaside swings. Any course you play, your nineteenth hole awaits on the barge.

Caledonia Culture

Our Classic Cruise included excursions to Cawdor and Eileen Donan Castles, the Culloden Battlefield, and Clava Cairns -the stones that inspired Outlander. There was a Distillery Tour and a spectacular Birds of Prey interaction in Fort Augustus with a former Abbey backdrop. Each evening brought a cultural surprise. Playing dress-up with Ian in ancient garb and hearing Alan, the kilt-making bagpiper, explain the instrument, the clans, and the sporran - "a job offer," he quipped - was silly, enlightening fun, while Sean and Hannah delighted us with jigs, reels, and a dance lesson.

2026 Pricing

A 6-night cruise aboard the 12-passenger Spirit of Scotland starts at USD $6,850 per person (based on two people sharing a cabin) and includes all gourmet meals, fine wines, an open bar for the duration, daily escorted excursions (golf or other), admissions, and private transfers at either end of the cruise.

Travel Tips

Come a day or two early and enjoy Inverness or fly into Edinburgh and then take the scenic train north as we did, to meet the crew. Pack light but smart. Choose layers and colors you love to mix and match. It's luxury leisure wear with a slightly dressier touch for dinners but leave the heels behind. Bring a swimsuit for the jacuzzi, and rest assured that robes and slippers await in the cabin.

Emotional Impact

We've been blessed to visit well over a hundred destinations in our 17 years of covering travel, and this fun filled, luxurious adventure stood out as a reflective journey. Maybe it was the progression through the many locks – an amazing feat of technology our dad celebrated every year, taking mom on a "surprise" visit to the Eisenhower Locks. Or maybe it was sailing for hours across Loch Ness with purple heather woven into the hills, passing castles with a slight breeze under cozy blankets on the upper deck. It was for all the people we connected with along the way. For so many reasons, it was simply the best!

BY GREG SAMPSON

When it comes to the world of training and fitness aids the market is no doubt flooded with many claims that just don't produce the feedback a golfer expects from their purchase. I have tested many over the past year and here are my picks.
