THE INTERNATIONAL'S

By Sean Melia

Golf has a way of connecting the past with the present. For 126 years, people have played golf on the grounds of The International in Bolton, Massachusetts. That rich history runs through the club.

From the origin of Runaway Brook in the early 20th century to Geoffrey Cornish and Francis Ouimet designing The Pines in the 1950s to Tom Fazio opening The Oaks in 2000 to Bill Coore and Ben Crenshaw reimagining The Pines course in 2025, The International has a deep connection to the game.

Now, with Escalante at the helm, The International hopes to deepen the connection to the past while stewarding the club into the future.

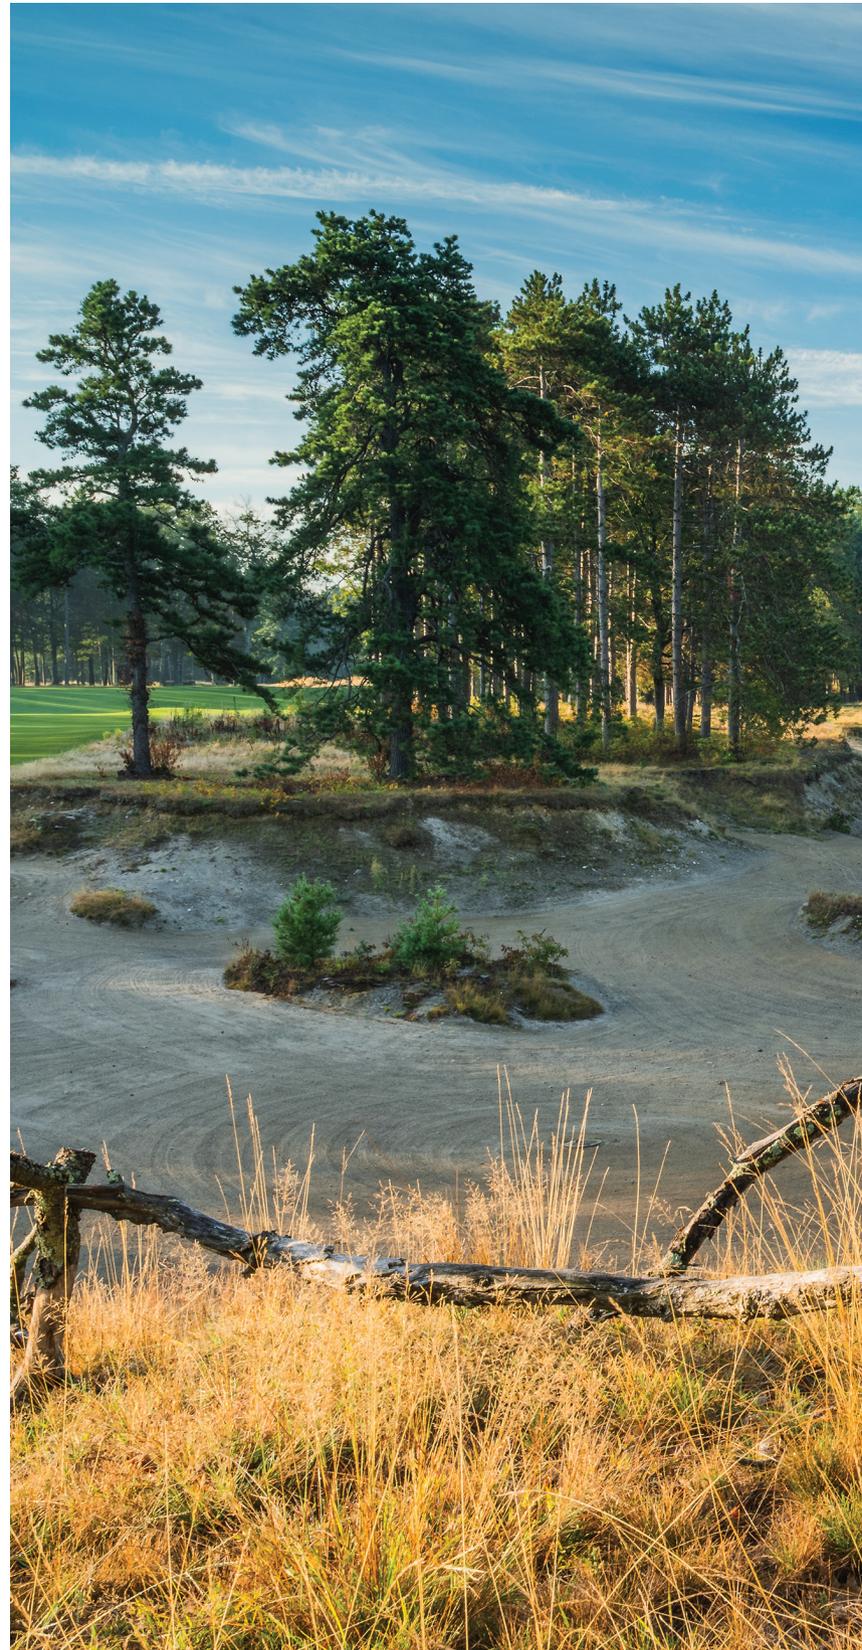

Refreshed and Reimagined

It's been quite a busy five years at The International. In the winter of 2021, Escalante Golf acquired the course and has made significant strides in improving its facilities for members while preserving the club's legacy and expanding its vision as the sport evolves.

Most notably, The Pines Course, originally designed by Geoffrey Cornish with the help of Francis Ouimet in 1955, has been reimagined by the Coore and Crenshaw design team. The undertaking was unique.

The course was known as one of the longest in the world, measuring 8,000 yards when it opened and stretched to 8,300 yards after a Robert Trent Jones renovation in 1972. But the bulky design lost its luster over time. Maintenance of such a large course is challenging, and the extra yardage wasn't a feasible test of golf as trees choked out various playing corridors.

Over the course of two years, Bill Coore and Ben Crenshaw undertook the immense task of reimagining The Pines course. New holes and greensites were built. In some spots on the new Pines, a player can identify the old Pines routing. In others, it's nearly impossible to recall the old design.

BOLD NEW CHAPTER

It wasn't a project that intended to erase the past; instead, it was meant to connect the past to the present so the club could flourish into the future.

In a Fried Egg Golf interview, Bill Coore said, "I think if he (Geoffrey Cornish) were standing here, he would probably say, 'Bill, Ben—this is a nice site. Go see what you can do with it.' I could be wrong, but having been around him a bit, that's my sense."

Coore and Crenshaw are best known for their ability to route a golf course in harmony with the land. They are typically walkable and blend seamlessly with the surrounding area, making them feel timeless.

The members understand what they have in the Pines. Patrick Lundgren said, "You really have something very special with The Pines course. Having played it yesterday for the first time, I am left speechless with how incredible that course is."

The strategy of working one's way around The Pines is also a delight. The massive greens create variation from day to day.

"Not a single boring green - everything makes you think and approach them from the proper place and with the proper type of shot," member Ben Grimmett said.

The reimagining of The Pines course is just one example of the changes Escalante has made since buying the club.

Within a few short months of Escalante's purchase in 2021, they hired Tripp Davis to renovate The Oaks course, a Tom Fazio design that needed some attention. Bunkers and tee boxes were the main focus of the project.

To make the course more playable for both beginners and experts, tee boxes were added, re-leveled, and re-grassed, and bunkers were improved. After 20 years, the course's strategic shots had changed, and Davis' work brought bunkers back into play, gave the beginner more space to play, and put mid-irons back in the hands of the better player to hit into the large greens.

The professionals put Davis' work to the test when LIV Golf held an event on the Oaks course in June 2022. Dustin Johnson won in a playoff over Anirban Lahiri and Joaquín Niemann.

Davis' work wasn't limited to the Oaks Course; the practice facility, one of the best in the region, was also improved. The 11-acre facility has a double-sided range, four practice greens, and four practice bunkers. Davis also regrassed the range and added new targets. There is even a section of the range with uneven lies so players can prepare for the real conditions of a golf course.

Two Distinct Courses

The International is the only 36-hole private golf club in New England.

That makes it stand out from other options in the region.

However, what makes The International unique among 36-hole clubs in the country is how different the two courses are.

Member Adam Hastings sums it up nicely.

"The new Coore & Crenshaw designed Pines Course is in a league of its own. The design is nothing short of spectacular, blending natural terrain with strategic brilliance in a way that challenged and rewards golfers of all levels. It's a course you'll want to play over and over again. Together with the perfectly conditioned and unbeatable views of The Oaks course, The International delivers a golf experience that's truly second to none."

Plenty of great clubs have two courses - Baltusrol GC,

Winged Foot, Philadelphia Cricket Club, and Congressional - but, for the most part, the courses occupy similar land. For example, as people play Baltusrol Upper, the Lower is in eyeshot across the same land and built by the same architect. The courses are different and offer different challenges, and members have their preferences, but the sense of place is the same.

That's not to say that the Upper and Lower at Baltusrol or the East and West Courses of Winged Foot are inferior to each other or don't offer different challenges.

But if someone were to stand on the first tee of the Oaks Course and play 18 holes and then head over to the Pines Course, they would have a hard time believing they are at the same golf club.

The Oaks pops with splashes of white bunkering against bent grass and rolling hills that offer vistas of Central Massachusetts, Mount Wachusett, and the Nashoba Valley. The thrill of that background is heightened by the shots players are asked to hit. The aerial game is what the course calls for, with tees set high above landing areas. Golf balls cut through the sky and tumble back to Earth. Big greens, some perched up and some sitting low, are protected by rough and bunkers.

"When I first arrived at The International, I was struck not only by how interesting the topography is, but also by the amazing job Tom Fazio did routing the golf course to fit and complement that topography," Davis said. "If I've learned anything renovating golf courses, it is that when you are given good bones to work with, it is easier to get the job done and done well. Good bones are what we have with the Oaks Course so our intent is not to redesign, but to enhance.”

On the other hand, the Pines course is wall-to-wall fescue grass, more prevalent in Scotland and Ireland than in New England. The course sits low, with greensites surrounded by short grass or rust-colored bunkers. Some have compared The Pines to North Carolina’s sandhills courses (i.e. Pinehurst No. 2 and Southern Pines). For others it evokes England’s wonderful heathland courses that sit in the earth and invite players to play the ball along the ground and enjoy a lovely walk.

“I recall first walking onto this site and immediately recognizing the potential for something truly interesting,” said Coore. The combination of unique landforms, amazing vegetation and just the overall natural beauty of the site – it’s all compelling. Using some existing corridors with the option to approach some areas from different angles makes us very excited that there will be some really diverse and good holes out here.”

Whatever a player’s mood on the drive to the club, there’s a golf course to enjoy. One thing is certain: the game will be tested, and every club in the bag will be used.

A Dazzling Final Act

There is excellent golf on both the Pines and the Oaks.

The downhill fourth hole at the Oaks is dramatic and offers stunning views. The stretch of par 4s in the middle of the round requires accuracy, length, and patience, and the 15th hole is the crescendo: a superb par 4 that mimics Pine Valley with its sandy scrub and an approach shot to a perched-up green. A thrilling hole.

Over on The Pines, the final six holes stand up to any closing stretch in the region. A spectacular mix of short and long holes with a collection of greens that are both delightful and daunting.

Thirteen plays over a newly dug out sand pit, but it also plays down the corridor of the old sixth hole before veering to the right for some extra yardage to one of the biggest greens on the course. Then the fourteenth, a jaw-dropping par 3, utilizes two holes from the original Cornish design.

Sitting just below the clubhouse and first tee, the boomerang green on 15 has hints of the eighth green at Old

The Pines 10th Hole

Sandwich, another Coore and Crenshaw that feels like it’s been around for 100 years. There will be heroic two-putts and incredible hole outs on this wild and delightful green that is sure to swing matches.

Then there’s the par-3 16th, which is dressed for drama. The tee box sits next to the wizard tee, and just like the 15th hole, it is in the shadow of the clubhouse.

16 is already on the list of best short par-3s in the region and will continue to accrue notoriety in the coming years. It’s an exceptional hole with a cavernous bunker protecting the left side and a pot bunker ready to punish shots that steer a little too clear of the massive pit.

Crowds will gather for member-guests, and bets might be settled on this delightful hole if 18 holes just weren’t enough.

Over the course of the two closing holes, players will be challenged by a multi-tiered 17th green protected by some deep bunkers, and then the 18th plays nearly along the same line of charm as the old Pines course. There will be many discussions between player and caddie on that fairway, adding up the pros and cons of trying to reach

“My favorite things about The International are their commitment to service and respect towards members. This creates and experience that makes the club feel like an oasis of golf. All of that combined with two courses that each bring a sense of tranquility and connection with nature, while offering different styles of play. The new Pines is an exemplary test of golf and brings fantastic views back to the clubhouse.”

-Sam Hastings

the par 5 in two as bunkers dot the landing area and protect the green.

It's an outstanding finish to an exceptional day of golf. Six holes that everyone will talk about on the 19th hole, rehashing shots, mishaps, and moments of glory.

Eyes to the Future

The International plans to continue enhancing the member experience. Lodging is one perk that's in the works. With 36 excellent holes, members can stay on the property and enjoy a few days of golf.

The cottages make a membership even more enticing. With those cottages, The International is also offering a new National Membership.

This membership is for anyone who rents or resides outside of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, and Vermont.

Bolton is just 35 minutes from Logan Airport, but it's also just 27 miles from Worcester Airport and 50 miles from Manchester Airport.

into the game through a caddie program it launched in the summer of 2025.

As the Pines Course grows in and matures, the fescue grass needs time to take hold, so golf carts are only allowed on the paths. This encourages golfers to walk The Pines. So now a number of high school and college students, along with veteran caddies, will elevate the experience at The International.

To organize and train caddies, The International has partnered with CADDIEMASTER, a company that helps clubs run a seamless, professional caddie program. Hunter Craig joined The International team as the caddie master after spending two years running the massive caddie program at Pebble Beach.

In a game often obsessed with what's new, The International has chosen a rarer path—one rooted in patience, restraint, and respect for what came before. Golfers walking The Pines today aren't just playing a newly built course, they're participating in a conversation that began more than a century ago, one that now feels poised to continue for another hundred years at The International.

In addition, the members all speak so highly of The International's staff. Making a weekend stay seem even more alluring.

Sam Hastings shared that sentiment, "My favorite things about The International are their commitment to service and respect towards members. This creates an experience that makes the club feel like an oasis of golf."

An oasis of golf.

Comfortable cottages. Exceptional, attentive staff. World-class golf. Great friends.

Oasis indeed.

While the future of The International might evoke images of new buildings and golf offerings, the club is also finding ways to bring young people

The Changing Value of Golf Course Land

BY SEAN MELIA

GOLF IS BOOMING in the United States. More people are playing, more rounds are being logged, and participation continues to climb well beyond its pre-pandemic baseline. According to the USGA, 3.68 million golfers maintained a Handicap Index in 2025—an increase of more than eight percent year over year and nearly 46 percent since 2020.

That growth shows up everywhere. In 2025, an estimated 48.1 million people played golf in the U.S., up from 41.1 million just three years earlier. In 2016, only 23 million people played the game. Golf is no longer in recovery mode; it is firmly in expansion.

Yet at the same moment the game is thriving, the land it depends on is under unprecedented pressure.

Across the country, golf courses are being sold—not because the game is failing, but because the open space they occupy has become more valuable to developers than to golfers. Solar farms, warehouses, housing, and data centers now compete directly with fairways and greens, forcing owners and municipalities to make difficult choices about money, access, and the future of shared green space.

This is the paradox of modern golf: participation is surging, but the places where the game is played are disappearing.

The impact of this growth is already visible, both in how golf is consumed—and in how its land is valued.

COURSES & CLUBS

Popular resorts like Bandon Dunes are using a lottery system for their on-property lodging.

In January, Meglodge Golf announced it plans to open an indoor, par-30 golf course in Oswego, Illinois, that will look and feel like golf in Arizona.

In Weston, Massachusetts, the state-owned Leo J. Martin will close for the 2026 season for a $5 million renovation.

Open spaces are attractive to developers, and they are willing to pay a premium, sometimes 10 times the value of the golf course, because they already have access to electricity, and trees have been cleared.

In 2026, two Massachusetts golf courses are slated to become solar farms.

Maplegate sold for $25 million to NextGrid and will not reopen this spring.

Cape Cod Country Club is also in the process of being rezoned and sold by Friel Golf Management to PureSky Energy. There are still some hurdles for this project, but as of now, it seems more likely than not it will close this summer.

A Target warehouse sits empty on what was once Green Meadow, a 36-hole facility in Hudson, N.H. The Friel family sold that property for $121.8 million.

In Pennsylvania, Dauphin Highlands, a municipal course, sold for $45.6 million. It will become a data center.

Golf owners are faced with a choice. Sell to the highest bidder and possibly see the course disappear, or take a smaller payout to someone who wants to run a golf course.

For some, the value of the land boils down to the bottom line. How much money can be made? How many generations in a family can have a headstart with millions of dollars to spread around?

But for people in the community the value of the land isn't about the price.

Open spaces are incredibly valuable to communities. They provide community places to play, relax, restore, and gather.

In 2022, Brookline Golf Course was the subject of some scrutiny from the town. The municipal course had just helped its neighbor, The Country Club, with some logistics and parking for the U.S. Open. Some believed the 18-hole public course should shrink to 9 holes.

Brookline GC has nearly 42,000 rounds a year, and about 10% of those rounds are Brookline residents. The draw for people to come to Brookline and play the course is strong, and it can benefit the local economy. They sell 60,000 buckets at their driving range a year, and Hemlock Grill in the clubhouse is worth visiting even if you don't have golf clubs with you.

After debate and discussion, the Town Meeting voters decided against the transition from 18 to 9 holes, as the case for open space and recreation swayed the voters.

One new perk for the Brookline community is that they are allowing people to cross-country ski on the land for free. The General Manager, Justin Lawson, invested in grooming equipment and wants the space to be usable year-round.

So what is the value of green space and golf courses?

It goes beyond the money.

The National Institutes of Health compiled a series of research papers and found that people living near or spending time in green environments typically experience less mental distress, lower anxiety and depression, and greater overall well-being than those in less green surroundings.

In addition, golf has its own benefits. According to the same NIH article, golf can help fight obesity, high blood pressure, and a sedentary lifestyle.

The question facing golf owners, municipalities, and communities isn't whether golf is popular enough to survive. The numbers make that clear. The question is whether the land that sustains the game is valued only as real estate, or as a shared civic resource. Brookline's decision shows that preservation doesn't have to be sentimental—it can be practical, economic, and inclusive. As pressure mounts and offers grow larger, more communities will be forced to decide what kind of value they prioritize, and what they are willing to lose in exchange for a payout.

“Walt Disney World Golf represents the pinnacle of resort-level golf experiences, setting a standard for service, design, and industry leadership,” said Cathy Harbin, President of the NGCOA Board of Directors. “The APMG team members at Walt Disney World Resort are passionate about our industry, delivering first-class experiences and inspiring others. It is a privilege to recognize their dedication to golf and highlight their achievements.”

It's called 'The Happiest Place on Turf!' for good reason.

BY GEORGE MCNEILLY

WHEN WALTER ELIAS DISNEY announced his secret “Florida Project” in 1965, golf played a key role in the planning process. In fact, as he flew over what is now the Walt Disney World Resort, he sketched out the Magic Kingdom Theme Park, several hotels, lakes, and golf courses, all of which opened in 1971.

While Walt never lived to see his vision come to fruition, he was keenly aware that you can't build a world-class resort in the Sunshine State without exceptional golf.

Joe Lee designed Disney's Palm and Magnolia Golf Courses, as well as Disney's Lake Buena Vista Golf Course layout near Disney Springs, which opened a year later.

For more than four decades, Disney was a very popular stop on the PGA Tour schedule, and none other than Jack Nicklaus won three times in a row from 1971 to 73 to start the party. Tiger Woods claimed victories here in 1996 and 98, and many Major winners, including Mark O'Meara, Davis Love III, Hal Sutton, Payne Stewart, Raymond Floyd, Lanny Wadkins, Vijay Singh, and David Duval finished atop the leaderboard here.

While the Tour moved on to new pastures after 2012, these award-winning championship courses became a focal point, available year-round.

“Our world-class courses have hosted some of the biggest names in professional golf, and our amenities and team members ensure that all of our guests fully enjoy their experience, from bag drop to their final putt, every day of the year,” said Bruce Gerlander, General Manager of Walt Disney World® Golf operated by Arnold Palmer Golf Management.

There's a wide selection of nearby lodging options, ranging from high-end places like Disney's Grand Floridian Resort & Spa and the Four Seasons to more budget-friendly, pleasant choices like Wyndham and Wyndham Garden Lake Buena Vista.

Dining options are abound at Disney Springs, which is a short walk from both Wyndham properties and Lee's third masterpiece. Disney's Lake Buena Vista Golf Course will undergo a major renovation in the coming months. This will include a complete greens overhaul, select bunker restorations, and a major upgrade to the irrigation system.

With 63 holes of golf available to guests, there's no shortage of opportunities to tee off on lush fairways while rolling putts on impeccable greens. Disney's Palm Golf Course was actually redesigned in 2013 with the King himself leading Arnold Palmer

Design Company every step of the way.

Walt Disney World Golf will soon unveil a statue of Grumpy and has introduced a new merchandise collection to celebrate the recent renovation of Disney's Magnolia Golf Course, which features “Grumpy's Gauntlet!”

Located adjacent to the 14th tee box, players will be able to capture their golf moments by snapping a photo with the beloved Disney character before pulling out their driver.

Last year, Disney's Magnolia Golf Course underwent a major redesign, which included reshaping and re-imagining the contouring upon the greens, rebuilding all teeing grounds, and renovating the chipping and bunker areas around the greens and along the fairways.

The key addition was the creation of “Grumpy's Gauntlet,” which features a redesign of holes 14 through 17. It is named after the beloved character from Disney's 1937 classic movie Snow White, where he famously stated, “Mark my words ... there's trouble a-brewin'!”

Rest assured, Grumpy's Gauntlet tests both shot selection and strategy for golfers of all skill levels.

The National Golf Course Owners Association recently named Walt Disney World® Golf, operated by Arnold Palmer Golf Management, as the 2026 Resort Course of the Year. Featuring the three iconic courses as well as Disney's Oak Trail Golf Course, a nine-hole walking experience, all were overseeded last Fall to ensure the best possible playing conditions now.

Rosewood Mayakoba and El Camaleón

BY DANNY AND ALICE SCOTT

The Destination

Tucked along a pristine stretch of the Mexican Riviera Maya, gated Mayakoba feels like a secret whispered between jungle and sea. Crystal-clear lagoons weave through emerald mangroves while the Caribbean shimmers beyond the powdery white-sand beach. Ancient Mayan heritage, hidden cenotes, and protected ecosystems sit alongside world-class hospitality. Mayakoba is less a destination than a state of mind: effortlessly refined, deeply serene, and utterly unforgettable.

The Venue

Rosewood Mayakoba is elegantly and invisibly integrated into its natural surroundings. Guests are greeted with warm smiles and a pineapple-mezcal elixir before being whisked away by boat taxi to their suite or villa. It feels like a real-life Jungle Cruise, gliding through lagoons toward paradise.

Disembarking at our private lagoon dock was magical, stepping up to our tropical terrace with a plunge pool and double chaise lounges. The expansive suite was thoughtfully indulgent, featuring a deep sunken tub beneath a skylight. A mini rainforest camouflages a second shower alfresco - an invigorating, luxurious experience.

Every Rosewood accommodation, whether ocean- or lagoon-side, includes a dedicated personal butler. Omar and Marimar were always at the ready, though we rarely requested a golf cart taxi. We preferred walking or biking through the lush pathways. Once we adjusted to our beach bikes' tall handlebars, quirky turning radius, and agreed to obey the "stop and walk your bike" sign over lagoon bridges, we loved pedaling. Rosewood lets you feel like a kid again - or bring your own kids to enjoy the property and the Explorer's Children Program.

While the resort is family friendly, Sense, A Rosewood Spa is a peaceful adult sanctuary. Guests can indulge in serene pools, reflective areas, saunas and globally acclaimed Mayan-inspired treatments, including shamanic counseling.

Me Quedo Aquí - "I stay here" - is an irresistible declaration at Rosewood's beach club where we spent hours, mesmerized by the waves. A sign cheekily reads Mañana trabajo - I'll work tomorrow. Swing in pink hammocks, collect seashells, and let the warm water lap at your toes or immerse yourself in the sea. Every hour, attendants circulate with refrescos - jicama sticks with savory sauce, coconut water mocktails, or mini mango popsicles. Lunch options include La Cantina food truck or the Aquí me Quedo restaurant.

At dinner, torches glow while salsa is mixed tableside. The ribeye and sea bass make a perfect surf and turf pairing to share. While four hotels and Mayakoba village together offer 20 restaurants and bars, Rosewood alone presents a global tour of flavors including Mexican and Mayan influences, far from a typical Taco Tuesday.

DESTINATIONS

El Zapote buzzes with energy, blending Middle Eastern and Mexican cuisine. Casa del Lago, overlooking the lobby pool and lagoon, serves breakfast with Central Mexican flair. Healthy, garden-driven creations appear throughout the resort's menus. For a truly special evening, La Ceiba Garden and Kitchen hosts communal dinners in the actual Chef's Garden, often attended by Managing Director Edouardo and his wife Kat. Live music, four beautifully composed courses and Mexican wine pairings make a lasting impression. In every restaurant, it seems like a chef's tortilla and chips cook off with endless crispy renditions, and inventive salsas.

The Golf

El Camaleón Golf Course is the world's only course to host all three tours – PGA, LPGA and Liv – and is the former home to the World Wide Technology Championship.

Designed by Greg Norman, the course demands attention to both strategy and scenery. Tropical vegetation heightens the senses, while limestone canals force golfers to weigh bold carries against smart layups.

Tee boxes marked with colored chameleons set a playful tone, and wildlife adds charm. We didn't encounter crocodiles, but it was unmistakably coati country. These curious, comical creatures – like racoons crossed with ring tailed monkeys, entertain with cart-hopping antics. A gentle "shoo" sends them on their way in this Certified Audubon Sanctuary.

Fairways wind through mangroves until par-three hole 4 unveils a breathtaking view of the Caribbean Sea. On hole 7, the famous cenote sits squarely in the fairway, taunting golfers. Balls lost to its depths are gone forever. Signature hole 15 offers not only a photogenic par three, but a cooler of beer at the tee and a Mayakoba sign by the green for a memorable seaside snapshot. The Jim McLean Golf Academy, located beside the range, offers Trackman analysis with Diego or Philippe Bazin.

And More

If the arrival cruise enchanted you, don't miss the Eco-Tour – a guided journey of the man-made, five years in the making lagoon system of brackish waters, waterfalls and cenote-fed channels. We spotted a crocodile, countless birds and vibrant fish. Snorkel, dive, or kayak in the Caribbean, or enjoy the sports courts on land.

Our Takeaway

Rosewood Mayakoba is built for serenity. From secluded suites to mangrove trails, beach and golf greens, nature soothes even the most restless spirit. While English is properly spoken, guests are always welcome to practicar español. Buenos Días here feel like some of the best days life has to offer.

Crestwood Country Club

Two Great Courses in One Small Town

BY JIM HAMMOND

THE USGA TRAVELS ACROSS THE USA

to select appropriate sites for major golf tournaments like the U.S. Amateur, and U.S. Men's and Women's Senior Open. To gain entry into these premier events, qualifiers are held at golf courses that test the skill of the best golfers in the country.

Crestwood Country Club

In the summer of 2021, Crestwood Country Club in Rehoboth, Massachusetts hosted sectional qualifying for the prestigious U.S.

Amateur golf tournament. One of the qualifiers was Davis Chatfield, who lived close by in the town of Attleboro, Massachusetts. Now Davis has made it to the PGA Tour.

In recognition of Crestwood as one of the best golf courses in the nation, the USGA has once again awarded Crestwood Country Club to be a qualifying site for a major event. The 2027 U.S. Amateur Four-Ball Champions Qualifier will be held at Crestwood September 8, 2026. Joe Moniz is the owner of Crestwood Country Club and he is always striving to make Crestwood Country Club one of the finest private clubs in the country. What is it about Crestwood that makes it an elite destination for discriminating golfers?

Crestwood was designed by the legendary architect Geoffrey Cornish. When planning a course, Cornish did not believe in bulldozing the land to make radical alterations in the landscape. Rather he believed in the "lay of the land approach" where he used the natural terrain to direct the placement of fairways, tees and greens. This way the course was left with majestic trees, winding rivers and countless species of birds that make their homes at Crestwood are preserved and create not just another golf course, but a scenic landscape for the discriminating golfer.

When you first arrive at Crestwood, the bag room staff tend to your bag and confirm tee times. Be sure to arrive early so you can take advantage of the extensive practice area.

The grass practice range encompasses 8 acres and there is plenty of room to warm-up your swing. After you feel like your long-game is ready fine-tune the all important short-game at the adjacent chipping and putting green area. There are a couple large sand bunkers available, and be sure to test your ability to escape the bunkers. Mr. Cornish has created some gigantic bunkers on the course to test your skills.

Before you tee-off verify tee times with one of the pros in the pro-shop. Be sure you have an adequate supply of balls, tees, & perhaps a new glove? Everything you need for a great round is in the fully stocked pro shop. If your game needs a little work, inquire about lessons from the pros.

Now you are ready to tee off and enjoy the Crestwood experience. Next to the first tee is another practice green, so roll a few putts as time allows, before you hit your opening tee shot.

To make all golfers feel comfortable, Crestwood has six sets of tees. From the gold tees the course plays 6,603 yards, and the forward tees are orange and play at only 4,052 yards. The great thing about golf is that people of all skills can enjoy the game, and the variety of tees at Crestwood makes it possible.

The first hole has a generous fairway but is boarded by some challenging rough. When you approach the green be sure to check the day's pin placement. The green slopes back to front so plan the putt carefully to secure a par.

Remember I told you to be sure to get in some work at the practice bunkers prior to teeing off? Well, the second hole is a dogleg and a mammoth bunker guards the corner so favor the left side to ensure a good angle to the green. The second green is challenging so check the lie from all angles to get a good chance at par.

The greens are slick at Crestwood, but the putt will always roll true. Many of the holes are guarded by trees, massive bunkers and gnarly rough that provide a challenge for the most experienced golfers. That is why the USGA has selected Crestwood as a qualifying site for the 2027 U.S. Amateur Four-Ball Championship.

I have had the pleasure of playing at Crestwood a number of times and enjoyed the fact that every hole is a challenge. Number five is 194 yards from the gold tees, and is all carry over a pond. The green slopes from back to front so be very cautious with your putt. All of the par-3's are well-designed. The 17th hole is 147 yards from the gold tees and is the shortest hole on the course. It is downhill and the green is surrounded by dense woods.

In addition to the challenge, ownership at Crestwood has employed a grounds crew that provides a pristine course that is enjoyed by members and their guests.

Crestwood Country Club

After golf, an expansive outdoor patio and a bar is available for drinks and a variety of delicious food. During the summer months live music is available for members as they relax and watch the sun set over the course. Or if you need to cool off a bit, a large inground pool, one for adults and a smaller one for kids, is available during the warm weather.

Crestwood is a private club, but hosts tournaments and weddings. A 39,000 square ft clubhouse offers a number of options for all kinds of events. For information inquire at 508-336-8582 or www.crestwoodcc.com

Hazelton Golf Club

Turn left out of Crestwood, and it is only a five-minute drive to Hazelton Golf Club. Like Crestwood, Hazelton is owned by local businessman Joe Moniz. It is also a course designed by Geoffrey Cornish. Hazelton was a favorite of local golfers, but unfortunately it fell into disrepair and eventually closed. Mr Moniz had enjoyed playing Hazelton with many friends for years, which at the time was called Sun Valley. Joe knew that Sun Valley had good bones and made a significant investment to bring the club back to life.

Now Hazelton Golf Club is open for public play. The course received its name after a white pigeon that Joe called Hazel, that followed him around the course. The course plays 6,700 yards from the back tees, but a multiple set of tees are provided so golfers of all skill levels can enjoy Hazelton.

A practice area is available for a pre-game- warm up, and a practice green is next to the first tee. A pro shop is fully stocked for all your needs. The course is fairly flat so it is a favorite of golfers who enjoy walking. But carts are readily available to all. (I believe rules for cart use require a drivers license but check with the pro shop) In addition to constant improvements to the course, the clubhouse, which is composed of light-colored stone is new and welcomes all. A roomy bar will serve a variety of beverages and plenty of tables are available to enjoy a post-round meal.

Joe Moniz has provided a great service by resurrecting a classic Cornish design that is available to the general public.

For more information about Hazelton Golf Club, which is also located in Rehoboth, Massachusetts., phone 508 557-1856, or web at www.hazeltongolfclub.com

Four Things to Add Effortless Distance and Play Pain Free

These four fundamentals could be the key to unlocking your longest, most consistent drives yet

Every golfer wants more distance, but not at the expense of their body or consistency. At Tour Physio & Performance, we've found that most players overcomplicate things. If you're serious about hitting it farther with less effort and feeling better doing so, focus on improving these four areas:

1. Flexibility: The Foundation of Rotation

Distance starts with mobility in the hips and upper back. We want golfers rotating their hips at least 30° and their ribcage at least 45°. Better rotation gives your swing a longer arc, more time to build speed, and helps reduce stress on your lower back. Tightness here doesn't just cost distance, it increases injury risk.

2. Strength & Power: Turn Mobility into Speed

Flexibility opens the door, but strength and power help you walk through it. Your legs, core, and upper body must be strong and explosive to transfer force from the ground into the club. Power is about how fast you can create force, not about getting bulky. Developing it helps you generate clubhead speed efficiently and safely.

3. Sequencing & Coordination: Timing Is Everything

Your swing should fire in a specific order: lower body → torso → arms → club. When this sequence breaks down, you lose speed and consistency. Poor coordination is like trying to crack a whip from the wrong end, it just doesn't work. Improving movement quality and timing can unlock speed without changing your technique.

4. Strike Location & Ball Flight: Make It Count

Speed means little if you can't find the sweet spot. To maximize distance, you need consistent center-face contact and solid launch conditions. Tour-level benchmarks include:

- Smash Factor: 1.48–1.50
- Launch Angle: 14–18°
- Spin Rate: 1,800–2,500 rpm
- Angle of Attack: +2° to +5°

How we help golfers just like you:

At Tour Physio & Performance, we help golfers identify their biggest areas for improvement, so they can focus on the things that actually move the needle. Our Golf Performance Assessment tests all four distance fundamentals and gives you a personalized plan to hit it farther, move better, and feel stronger on and off the course.

FIRST CUT TO FINAL STITCH

Iliac was built on control of material, process, and time. Every piece begins as premium raw leather and is cut, stitched, and inspected under one roof, allowing custom orders to move from hide to final stitch in less than 14 days with no minimums and no compromise in craftsmanship. We do not produce fast fashion for the course, but enduring pieces designed to age with character and travel with purpose.

01 Olympian Headcover

Defined by its structured silhouette and disciplined proportions, the Olympian Headcover is constructed from premium full grain leather selected for durability and depth of character. Each panel is hand cut and stitched in house to ensure alignment, tension, and longevity. Built to hold its form through sessions of play, it is designed to age with the bag rather than be replaced by it.

02 Velora Clutch

A study in restraint, the Velora Clutch balances refined carry with practical function. Constructed from the same elevated materials as our on course goods, it features clean edge finishing and reinforced stitching that preserve structure over time. The silhouette is intentional, compact without feeling minimal, and purposeful without excess.

03 Range Finder Case

Precision equipment demands intentional protection. The Range Finder Case is hand cut and stitched for a tailored fit, maintaining structural integrity without excess bulk. Constructed from premium leather and finished with clean edge detailing, it safeguards essential tools while preserving a cohesive aesthetic across the bag.

04 Texas Tote

Built for transition between course, office, and travel, the Texas Tote emphasizes structure and reinforcement. Premium hides are selected for consistency and grain integrity, while seam construction is reinforced to support weight without distortion. The result is a carry piece that maintains form and develops character through use rather than fatigue.

05 M Kit

Compact in scale yet deliberate in execution, the M Kit reflects a disciplined approach to utility. Each component is measured for proportion and assembled with the same in house standards as larger pieces. It is designed to organize essentials without unnecessary detail, favoring durability and longevity over trend driven features.

06 Red Label Backpack

Designed for daily movement, the Red Label Backpack balances structure with ergonomic consideration. Weight distribution is engineered through strap placement and reinforced anchor points, while the body maintains a refined profile. The leather is selected to develop a natural patina over time, ensuring the piece evolves rather than deteriorates.

07 Milano Duffel

The Milano Duffel is constructed as a long term travel companion. Reinforced base panels, structured side walls, and hand finished edges provide stability under load while preserving silhouette. Built from premium leather that softens without losing integrity, it transitions seamlessly from airport to clubhouse with a consistent material identity.

08 Strato 3.0 Belt

Engineered as a foundation piece, the Strato 3.0 Belt integrates performance flexibility with luxury leather finishing. The strap is selected for strength and resilience, while the hardware is chosen for understated durability. Designed for on and off the course.

Train Smarter. Strike Better. Get Instant Feedback.

The patented Divot Board gives you real swing feedback, anywhere you practice.

In a perfect world, every golfer would practice off real turf at the range every day. But real life doesn't work that way.

Most practice happens at home. In the garage. Between meetings. On range mats that don't tell you the truth.

That's where Divot Board changes the game.

Divot Board is a patented golf training aid that provides instant visual feedback on your strike. After each swing, the sequined surface reveals exactly where your club contacted the ground — fat, thin, inside-out, outside-in, heel, toe. Then you simply swipe it smoothly and go again.

No guessing. No complicated tech. Just honest feedback.

Unlike typical turf mats that mask poor contact, Divot Board shows you the truth about your low point and swing path. Pair it with a simulator, and you get the full picture: ball flight plus ground contact. One track's distance. The other tracks reality.

Built to be durable, portable, and easy to use indoors or outdoors, Divot Board works on turf, carpet, and range mats. Add our Grip Pad for stability on hard surfaces.

Whether you're a competitive player or someone who wants to enjoy the game more, improvement starts with feedback. Divot Board was created by golfers who wanted a smarter way to train, and it's now used by players around the world.

If you want to practice with purpose instead of just hitting balls, this is your tool.

THE OWL'S NEST RESORT VINEYARD COURSE

Come Stay & Play at the Best New Golf Course in New Hampshire

Owl's Nest Vineyard Course, formerly known as White Mountain Country Club, and recently acquired by the Owl's Nest Resort group of companies, is now recognized as the best new golf course in New Hampshire. Originally designed by renowned golf course architect Geoffrey Cornish, the course has been reimaged by Robert McNeil of The Northeast Golf Company. The vision to create a premier 36-hole golf destination by combining the Resort Course and the Vineyard Course is now a reality. Come experience the best new golf course in New Hampshire.

Owl's Nest Resort now offers 36 holes of premier golf with the famed Nicklaus-Designed Course and the new Owl's Nest Vineyard Course. A $7 million extensive renovation has transformed the course into one of New Hampshire's finest golf destinations. The 18-hole Vineyard Course, located in Ashland, New Hampshire, features a 6,277-yard layout with a par of 70. The course rating is 69.5, with a slope rating of 120. After the extensive redesign and refitting by the McNeil Group, the course plays like a brand-new championship layout. The course plays much like a brand-new golf course after extensive redesign and refitting by the McNeil Group. One of the strongest features of the course is the final four holes, which are reminiscent of the links-style courses found in Ireland and Scotland, offering a challenging and unforgettable finish.

The majestic course sits alongside the Pemigewasset River (commonly known as the Pemi River), which flows into the river basin in Franconia Notch, New Hampshire, in the heart of the White Mountains. The new course is recognized as one of the “Best New” public golf courses in the state.

The Vineyard at the Course / Accommodations

The 10-acre vineyard located off the right side of Hole #3 on the Vineyard Course is now the largest vineyard in New Hampshire. It is set to produce 100% organic wines. Owl’s Nest Vineyard Course is equipped with four condos, each sleeping up to seven guests. In 2023, the condos underwent a complete interior/exterior renovation, modernizing the spaces and updating amenities to provide a luxurious and comfortable stay.

Pemi Burger Bar — Now Open at Vineyard Course

Rooted in the heart of New Hampshire’s White Mountains, Pemi Burger Bar serves up bold, handcrafted burgers made with locally sourced meats, fresh produce, and house-made sauces. Our laid-back, rustic atmosphere reflects the adventurous spirit of the Granite State—genuine, welcoming, and full of flavor.
